

MeetHear is a communication system that eliminates the need to set apart students and employees who are deaf, hard of hearing or have learning disabilities, and provides them with a tool enabling them to join in lectures, discussions and meetings.

Effective Communication

MeetHear can be used in server-only mode for individuals with learning disabilities, such as Asperger's, where a note-taker is beneficial to the individual. The text created by the speech-to-text engine can be saved and emailed to the student / employee.

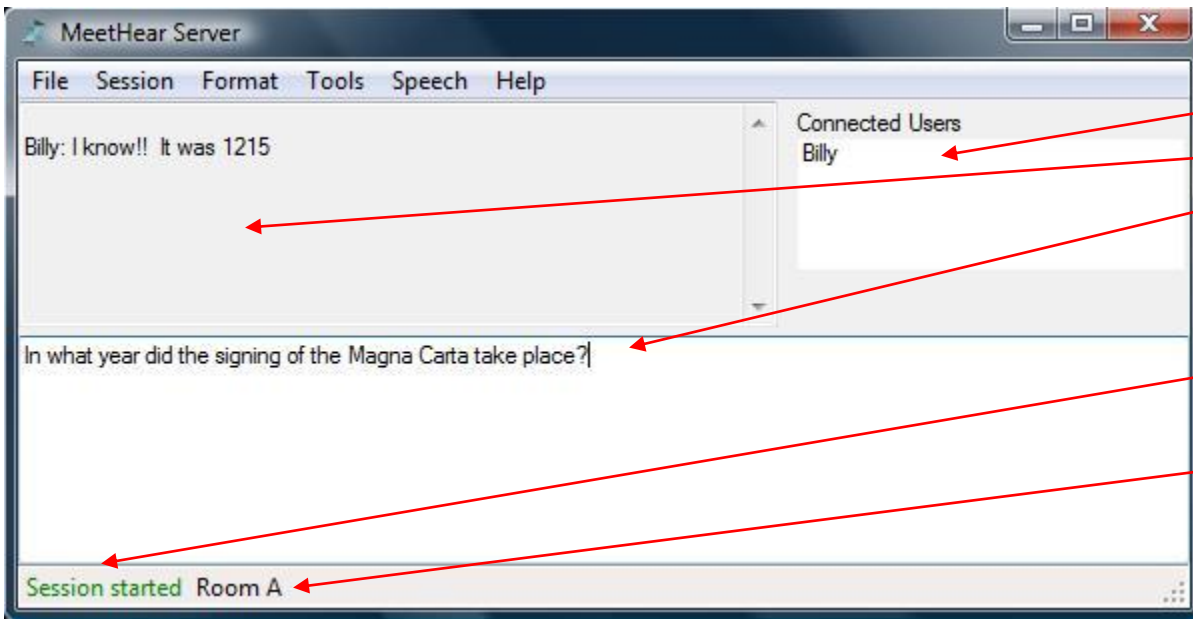

- * Supports speech-to-text and typed information
- * Text can be captured and saved, and emailed to any number of recipients
- * Immediate availability of information

* Exclusive multi-tasking feature, avoids the extra cost of an additional computer

* Multiple servers can be used in the same facility (schools, large businesses)

For individuals who are deaf or hard of hearing, MeetHear can be used as a client-server system, enabling the individuals to participate in the discussion. The client device receives the text created by the speech-to-text engine wirelessly, and responds with questions, answers and comments. The server allows the teacher / speaker to receive the input from the client device, and share the responses with the entire audience.

Breaking Barriers

- The server displays:
- users
 - user input
 - the text created by the speech-to-text engine
 - the status of the session
 - the name of the room (class or meeting)

MeetHear Server

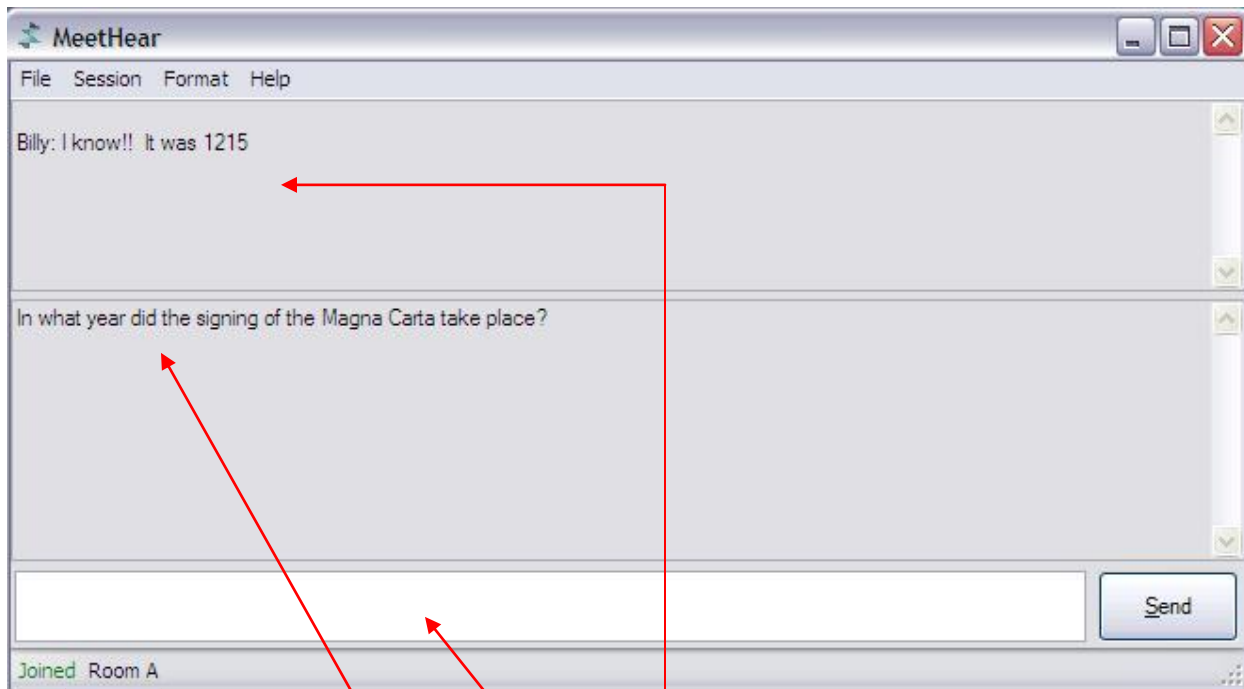

Effective Communication

Breaking Barriers

- * Supports multiple users in classrooms or meetings
- * Allows individuals to sit anywhere, avoiding stereotyping
- * Interactive for individuals who are unable to speak
- * Users receive input from other users

MeetHear Client

The client displays:

The status of the session

The name of the room (class or meeting)

The text created by the speech-to-text engine

The user can create input and send it to the server

Input from all client devices

Peacock Communications, Inc.
540 Powder Springs St., Ste E-32
Marietta, GA 30064

678-938-0504

sales@complements.com

www.complements.com

Inclusive